Quote of the week
"Governments do not govern, but merely control the machinery of government, being themselves controlled by the Hidden Hand"

Resentment tearing White Nationalism apart...

It's revealing to look at the word itself. "Resentment" is close to "re-sentiment"—"sentiment" meaning "feeling" and "re" meaning "again." So, resentment is literally "feeling again." This gets to the heart of resentment: recycling old negative feelings or revisiting old wrongs done to us by others.

It's as if each of the offending incidents is captured on videotape in our minds. Resentment, in effect, is mentally replaying the scene countless times each day. As we do so, real wrongs grow worse, and wrongs that are merely imagined assume a life of their own.

This mental habit extracts tremendous costs. After all, resentment does nothing to change the person we resent. Nor does it resolve conflict. Instead of freeing us from the wrongs of others, resentment allows those people to dominate our thinking—a kind of emotional bondage

....and personal often decades old resentments are ripping apart White Nationalism in Britain. I have noticed this with some of the excuses I am getting for people who are emailing me - in depressing numbers - saying they would come to the JT meeting but not if A was speaking or they would have to sit next to B or they would be forced to talk to C.

All the reasons I am being given are ALL down to personal resentments often going back decades!

This has been accelerated over the last decade or so by the misuse of the net, especially the Social Media platforms.

Whilst the net is one of the most powerful weapons ever being made available to the World White Nationalism, its misuse has magnified it way beyond the horizons of sanity.

As is widely known I do not use nor will I ever use Social Media.

I am opposed to the bunch of the seeming Chosen Elite, Mark Zuckerberg and Sergey Brin and Larry Page who own Google with its myriad offshoots, as examples

Do you think this Chosen Elite aren't happy when they see White Nationalists saying the most shocking things about each other on thousands of millions, strong public platforms that reap the Elite billions of dollars?

"Hope Not Hate" ex-Nationalist traitor Matthew Collins gathers over 90% of what he writes from what he picks up from social media Nationalists attacking each other and each others families with the most shocking allegations, often sickening in their nature, whilst they fill the pages of the "Hope Not Hate" website, magazine and his personal Blog.

Searchlight does the same and you can bet so does AFA, Unite Against Fascism and the soon to be resurrected Anti-Nazi League (2018).

That is no to mention all the agencies of the System such as Special Branch, MI5, MI6, Mossad and God knows who else, and all because British White Nationalists cannot realise we have only room for one resentment and its a BIG one!

Save you resentment not for your Comrades in arms - agree to agree to differ if you cannot restore relations and RESENT THE GLOBALIST POWER THAT IS DESTROYING YOUR RACE!

White South Africa: A REAL Holocaust!

WARNING: GRAPHIC CONTENT

LAST month, British woman Sue Howarth and her husband Robert Lynn were woken at 2am by three men breaking into a window of their remote farm in Dullstroom, a small town in the northeast of South Africa, about 240 km from the nearest capital city.

The couple, who had lived in the area for 20 years, were tied up, stabbed, and tortured with a blowtorch for several hours. The masked men stuffed a plastic bag down Mrs Howarth's throat, and attempted to strangle her husband with a bag around his neck.

The couple were bundled into their own truck, still in their pyjamas, and driven to a roadside where they were shot. Mrs Howarth, 64, a former pharmaceutical company executive, was shot twice in the head. Mr Lynn, 66, was shot in the neck.

Miraculously he survived, and managed to flag down a passer-by early on Sunday morning. Mrs Howarth, who police said was "unrecognisable" from her injuries, had multiple skull fractures, gunshot wounds and "horrific" burns to her breasts. "Sue was discovered amongst some trees, lying in a ditch," writes Jana Boshoff, reporter for the local Middelburg Observer newspaper. "Her rescuers managed to find her by following her groans of pain and then noticing drag marks from the road into the field. "Her head was covered with a towel. Her eyes were swollen shut. She was partially clothed with just scraps of her shirt remaining. Her breasts upper body was bloody. The plastic bag, shoved down her throat, took some effort to remove because her jaw was clamped down tightly.

"How she managed to breathe with the bag in her throat remains a mystery. One of her rescuers later recalled how Sue was unresponsive except for the constant groaning. Whilst the man ran back to the road to see if an ambulance has not arrived yet, she managed to curl one of her arms around her breasts in a last attempt to protect herself." She was rushed to hospital and placed on life support, but died two days later. Due to her British nationality, her murder attracted an unusual amount of overseas media attention.

In any other country, such a crime would be almost unthinkable. But in South Africa, these kinds of farm attacks are happening nearly every day. This year so far, there have been more than 70 attacks and around 25 murders in similar attacks on white farmers.

Earlier this month, for example, 64-year-old Nicci Simpson was tortured with a power drill during an attack involving three men at her home on a farm in the Vaal area, about two hours drive from Johannesburg.

When paramedics arrived, they found three dead dogs, and the woman lying in a pool of blood, spokesman Russel Meiring told News24. "They used a drill to torture her," police spokesman Lungelo Dlamini said.

Official statistics on farm attacks are non-existent, due to what human rights groups have described as a "cover-up" by the notoriously corrupt — and potentially complicit — South African government.

The most reliable numbers are released by the Transvaal Agricultural Union, which represents commercial farmers, and civil rights group AfriForum.

According to the TAU, last year there were 345 attacks resulting in 70 deaths — the highest death toll since 2008. In 2015 there were 318 attacks resulting in 64 deaths, and the year before there were 277 attacks resulting in 67 deaths.

In total, between 1998 and the end of 2018, 1948 people have been murdered in farm attacks — 1187 farmers, 490 family members, 147 farm employees, and 24 people who happened to be visiting the farm at the time.

While South Africa has one of the highest rates of violent crime anywhere in the world, the attacks on white farmers are no ordinary crimes.

In a 2014 report, "The Reality of Farm Tortures in South Africa", AfriForum wrote that "the horror experienced during farm tortures is almost incomprehensible".

"The well-known 'blood sisters' from the South African company Crimescene-cleanup have rightly indicated that, in their experience, farm tortures are by far the most horrific acts of violence in South Africa," the report said.

"They are of the opinion that the term 'farm murders' is misleading and that the terms 'farm terror' and 'farm tortures' are more suitable."

"BUT MOTHER," THE SON INTERRUPTS, "WHAT IF THE TURK KILLS ME?"

"YOU?" EXCLAIMS THE MOTHER. "BUT WHY? WHAT HAVE YOU DONE TO HIM?"

"THE LESBIANS NEXT DOOR BOUGHT ME A ROLEX FOR MY BIRTHDAY. I THINK THEY MISUNDERSTOOD WHEN I SAID I WANNA WATCH..."

I WOULD LIKE TO ASK THE PERSON WHO GAVE THIS LARGE AMOUNT OF MONEY TO PLEASE STAND."

THE GAY MAN STOOD UP.

THE MINISTER CONTINUED, "WELL, SIR, WE CERTAINLY DO APPRECIATE YOUR GENEROSITY. AND TO SHOW OUR APPRECIATION, I'M GOING TO LET YOU SELECT YOUR THREE FAVOURITE HYMNS."

"OKAY," THE GAY MAN REPLIED, "I'LL TAKE HIM, HIM AND HIM!"

Food Stamps

Both the radical Right and the radical Left underestimate the present system's foresight in preventing the kind of social chaos brought on by the Depression. This is the danger when looking through the prism of the past instead of visualizing the future.

There are roughly 40 million people on food stamps. And, as long as the food stamps keep coming, the chance of real political upheaval is doubtful. People with full bellies rarely rebel.

However, once the food stamps stop, then the time for revolution will have arrived. Understand that the food stamp program is not an act of charity by an otherwise uncaring and callous system, but an act of self-preservation, and once it has consolidated its power, it will come to an abrupt end.

Think about this: you have knuckleheads who are on the streets now, protesting because someone was mean to them, or called them names. imagine how they will be behaving when they are hungry?

Until that time, we need to concentrate on developing the necessary organizational apparatus for when that time comes, and it is coming. That doesn't mean we should hide in a shell, but we should use this time to prepare for the worst, by getting organized now.

We shall FIGHT in the Streets!

They are toppling the statues
Tearing up the flags of Glory
They are wiping out those memories
Of a brave and bloody story
Made our heroes into devils
Changed the cause of right to wrong
Burned the images of freedom
But they cannot burn a song

So we'll sing about White Mansions
Tell the tales of Blue and Gray
Of a Nation-seeking people
Twice a lifetime's bravest days
Of the way of life trod down
And the Southern blood that flowed
All the courage and the carnage
All the bravery that showed

It was not a fight for cowards
It was not a fight for gain
'Twas a struggle for the right to live
The way they would again
So raise up again the statues
Let the Battle Flag fly high
Let the cause of Southern Heritage
Fill our hands and hearts and eye.

— Eddy, 2018

The "American Civil War" was as uncivil as any other war, and in the South is called "the War of Northern Aggression." It was, in fact, the 2nd American Revolution, a valiant attempt to free the South from a Tyrant Regime. Let Aryans everywhere take that example to heart. — ST

Race, Nation, And NATIONALISM

Part 1

Seth Tyrssen

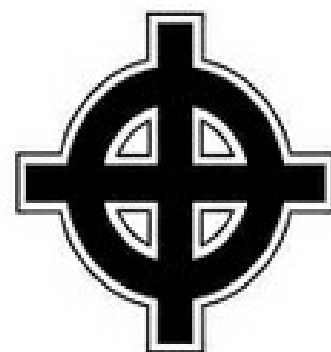

Had an interesting email exchange with Eddy, which prompted me to give some thought to the race issue. As a modern “Mosleyite” Fascist I had always downplayed this in the (now-defunct) American Fascist Party. America being quite a hodge-podge of various peoples, and Fascism having a universal appeal, we simply were open to anyone who agreed with our views. Other Fascists elsewhere may well take a different approach.

Now, not all Nationalists are Fascist, by any means, so where the race issue is concerned, it seemed logical to approach this in several parts. What is race; why is it important; and how does it apply to a world-view for the future. It also seems best to keep it as simple as possible, without pretending to be a scholarly expert, which I’m not.

To begin with: we’ve all heard those well-meaning people who say “there’s no such thing as race,” or, “we’re all the human race.” Well, no, sorry. Humanity is a species. The various races are sub-groups of that species.

Each race has its own unique characteristics, and not only physical. Each has its own “collective unconscious,” a “racial soul” of which every individual is a part; this is what largely determines the culture and perceptions of the various racial groups. Those perceptions, in turn, determine direction and points of emphasis.

Some will contend that this also determines various levels of intelligence and ability. Conventional sociologists will freak out at this notion, responding that it’s all due to environment, not race. But I would suggest that environment is a direct by-product of any given “racial soul,” in many if not most cases.

This may explain why some people have built majestic cities and advanced science, and others have not.

But it is also true that often, more “primitive” races have an intricate cosmology, and deep contact with nature.

So, what are the races? Eddy offered this comment: “The old H.B. Isherwood racial classification is murky and very much of the 1930’s, if not before. Isherwood classified five races: Caucasian, Mongoloid, Negroid, Australoid, and Amerind. With a bunch of sub-racial or even tribal groupings under that.” I would agree that this classification is incomplete, at best. The “Caucasian” term relates to the Caucasus mountains, and the White race certainly has a wider basis.

Eddy goes on, with this observation: “I would contend that the racial divisions of Homo Sapiens is as follows: Aryan (formerly Caucasian,) Mongoloid (east of the Urals through to Japan,) East Asian (Indian subcontinent, most countries south of the Himalayas, the islands of East Asia, Ceylon, Pakistan, etc. No way does a South Dravidian Indian look like a Japanese!) Australoid (origins a mystery, and probably a different species as in just Homo Sapiens;) African (Blacks from wherever,) Bushmen-Hottentot (aboriginals of southern Africa, again, species question;) Amerind (so-called “native American,” Mongoloid mixed with aborigines of North America with whom they interbred, providing a new racial classification;) Amazonian (the very primitive aboriginals of Southern America as seen especially in the dwarf tribes of the Amazon basin and Tierra Del Fuego, Isherwood lumps these in with the Commanche!) and Pacific Oceanica (Inca, Polynesians, Melanrsians, Maori.)”

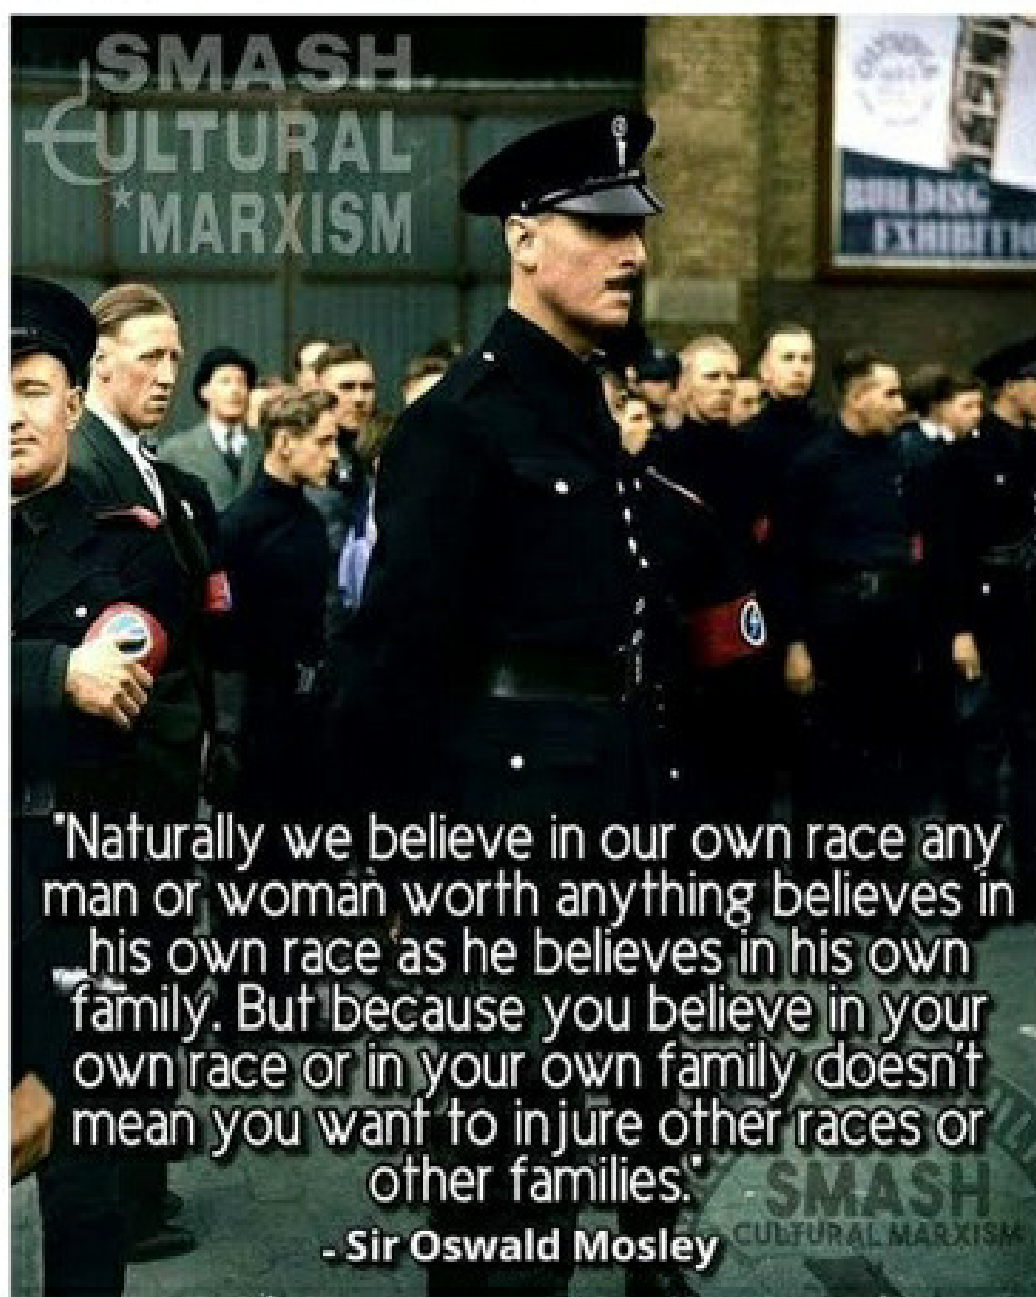

It gets a little complicated, to be sure, particularly where the “Amerind” race is concerned. Recent archaeological discoveries have shown that the aboriginal race that existed on the North American continent was originally a European (Aryan) type!

And the Chinese, always a little touchy about their own racial superiority, were not overjoyed when red-haired, Aryan-looking “mummies” were found, which predated their Asian people. These “earliest Chinese” apparently built a number of pyramids in China as well, another fact the Chinese tend to sit on.

Eddy feels that the Semitic peoples are basically East Asian racial groups; personally I feel that they constitute a separate racial branch entirely.

The Semitic peoples of the Middle East -- both Arabic and Jewish -- are also sort of a "mixed bag." The name of the country Iran, after all, originally meant Aryan, being founded by Aryan people that came from the northwest. But very few there today look Aryan. And the "stereotype Jew" portrayed unfavorably in so many illustrations, are not true Jews at all, but Khazars from the East. Additionally, there are about 30 sub-groupings, including the Sephardic Jews who are often blond-haired, blue-eyed, and look like Aryans.

What do any notions of race have to do with Nationalism, you may well ask? I'll touch on that in more detail, in an upcoming article. Suffice it to say, it's important to know who we are, where we came from, and where we're going. It's our link to our own people, and our own Racial Soul. --ST

"Naturally we believe in our own race any man or woman worth anything believes in his own race as he believes in his own family. But because you believe in your own race or in your own family doesn't mean you want to injure other races or other families."

- Sir Oswald Mosley

While sometimes farmers and their families are tortured to obtain information, such as the whereabouts of keys to the safe, human rights groups say the excessive brutality may be intended to send a message to the general farming community — get out of our country.

Victims are often restrained, harmed with weapons such as machetes and pitchforks, burned with boiling water or hot irons, dragged behind vehicles and shot. Female victims are often raped during attacks.

AfriForum warns that the attacks are becoming increasingly sophisticated, military-style raids, but says community farm watch groups and sharing of information on WhatsApp and Facebook were thwarting a “significant” number.

The three men responsible for killing Mrs Howarth — Themba William Yika, Nkosinathi Yika and Lucas Makua — were arrested soon after, and more than 150 farmers turned up to demonstrate outside court.

But any form of justice is incredibly rare, and white farmers are increasingly questioning their future. The number of white farmers in South Africa has halved in a little over two decades to just 30,000. Thousands more farms are up for sale.

“The farmers live in fear, because being a farmer in South Africa is the most dangerous occupation in the world,” Henk van de Graaf, spokesman for the TAU, told Swedish newspaper Nya Tider last year.

“The average murder ratio per 100,000 of the population in the world is nine, I believe. In South Africa, it is 54. But for the farming community it is 138, which is the highest for any occupation in the world.”

Since 2007, at the direction of the government, South African police have stopped releasing statistics about the race of the victims. Monitoring group Genocide Watch says the cover-up has been exacerbated by American and European governments, which have “remained silent about the problem, reinforcing the campaign of denial”.

The rise in farm attacks has been blamed on increasingly anti-white hate speech, particularly from the ruling African National Congress.

In 2010, high-profile ANC member Julius Malema sang “Shoot the Farmer, Kill the Boer”, which Genocide Watch describes as “once a revolutionary song, but now an incitement to commit genocide”.

Malema was convicted for hate speech and the singing of the song was banned, but just seven months later president Jacob Zuma sang the song himself at an ANC event, in direct contempt of the judge’s ruling.

Malema was later kicked out the ANC, forming his own Marxist party, the Economic Freedom Fighters, which is now the third-largest party in parliament. Recently, Malema has been travelling the country urging black South Africans to take back land from “Dutch thugs”.

“People of South Africa, where you see a beautiful land, take it, it belongs to you,” Malema was quoted in The Telegraph as telling parliament.

Perhaps in response to populist pressure from Malema, Zuma earlier this month called for the confiscation of white-owned land without compensation. Zuma urged the “black parties” in the parliament to unite to form the two-thirds majority that would be needed to make the necessary change to the country’s constitution.

Last year, during a debate in parliament about the farm attacks, an ANC MP shouted “Bury them alive!” while MP Pieter Groenewald was speaking about the plight of white farmers.

“This is proof that the utterances of political leaders could lead to violence and murders and that the issue of farm murders is of little importance to the ANC,” AfriForum’s head of community safety, Ian Cameron, said in a statement afterwards. “Certain members of the ANC were chatting during the debate and not listening nor partaking at all.”

While right-wing groups have claimed South Africa is experiencing “white genocide”, Genocide Watch disputes that characterisation. According to the group’s founding president, Dr Gregory Stanton, “early warnings of genocide are still deep in South African society, though genocide has not yet fully begun”.

“The fact that farm murders do not comply with the legal definition of genocide in no way renders the crisis that white farmers in particular face in South Africa as less imminent,” AfriForum deputy CEO Ernst Roets wrote in a report two years ago.

“It is important to note that not all who are murdered on farms are white people. On the other hand, it is equally important to note that black farmers are not subjected to the same levels of torture as their white counterparts.”

Australian rice farmer Graeme Kruger, who emigrated from South Africa to New Zealand in 1997 before coming to Australia in 2012, said an increasing number of white farmers were getting out.

“I would like to say, I certainly have never been and was never a supporter of the apartheid regime, and I certainly didn’t immigrate because I wanted to get away from South Africa,” said Kruger, now executive director of the Rice growers’ Association of Australia.

“We supported and openly celebrated the changes. But equally what is happening now is not right. To me it’s about humanity. Whether it’s the old apartheid regime or black-on-black violence or xenophobia, leaders need to be very careful with their positions and inciting violence towards anyone.”

Kruger’s family, like many, has been touched by violence. “My wife’s aunt — it wasn’t a farm situation — they broke in through the roof, stole her TV, tied her up with cords and she was killed,” he said.

Asked whether he feared South Africa would become another Zimbabwe, where white farmers have all but been driven out, Kruger was uncertain.

“My family back in South Africa have chosen not to [get out], and they love living there,” he said. “They have a very hopeful, pragmatic view, but they are also concerned.

“South Africans have got this undying ability to believe in the bigger picture, and I’m talking about many blacks. There are lots of wonderful people of all colours that believe all of this stuff is wrong.

“The question I would ask, given the rhetoric, is there a future for farming in South Africa? It’s not just about, is there a future for white farmers. It’s three times more dangerous to be a farmer than it is to be a policeman. It’s sad — it’s not what we want.”

And Other Writings on the Holocaust,
Revisionism, and Historical Understanding

Amazon Readers Reviews

This book, which incompletely characterizes itself as a "literary analysis" of the official account of the Holocaust, provides the historical and cultural contexts in which the development and dissemination of the Holocaust story can be understood as never before. At no point does it undertake to say, or even speculate, as to "what really happened." Rather, it examines who told whom what, when, and where. And this examination attempts to recreate the times, places, and situations in which the information in question arose and was put about, even to the point of exploring earlier historical and cultural events that would affect these. The analysis discovers and reveals the beliefs and attitudes dominating among the people dealing in the information in the manner of the finest products of the craft of historiography, in keeping with the extensive credentials claimed by the pseudonymous author. Of course, those credentials can never be confirmed so long as the author avails himself of the protections of anonymity.

In that the analysis seriously calls into question the accuracy and even truthfulness of many important elements of the legally mandated Holocaust story, the author's choice to remain anonymous is more than understandable, regrettable though it might be to "him," his fans, and his enemies.

After reading this book, I realized that my understanding of the Holocaust story, its origins, and its true meanings, had been deepened profoundly.

This is a terrific, consciousness-changing book. It explains, in human and fully understandable terms, how the Holocaust narrative as we know it, came to be.

The book is invaluable because this must surely be the Holocaust establishment's strongest weapon - the sheer incredibility of the revisionist proposition. How could such a deception have taken place? How could all those survivors be so wrong in their testimonies? How could all those perpetrators be so wrong in their confessions? How could all those documents, unspecific as they are, have been falsified? Arthur Butz called his groundbreaking revisionist study "The Hoax of the Twentieth Century", but a hoax of this size and nature just defies belief. Conspiracy theories rarely convince, nor do those who propagate them, so if revisionism is to have any credibility at all, it must demonstrate how, if false, the Holocaust narrative, as we know it, came to be.

This book does just that. It is the kind of book that lights a match in your mind and changes you forever. Samuel Crowell describes himself as a 'moderate revisionist'. Well, maybe he is, but along with that small, brave band of 'immoderate' revisionists, Crowell sets us free from the false god of the Holocaust. Read it.

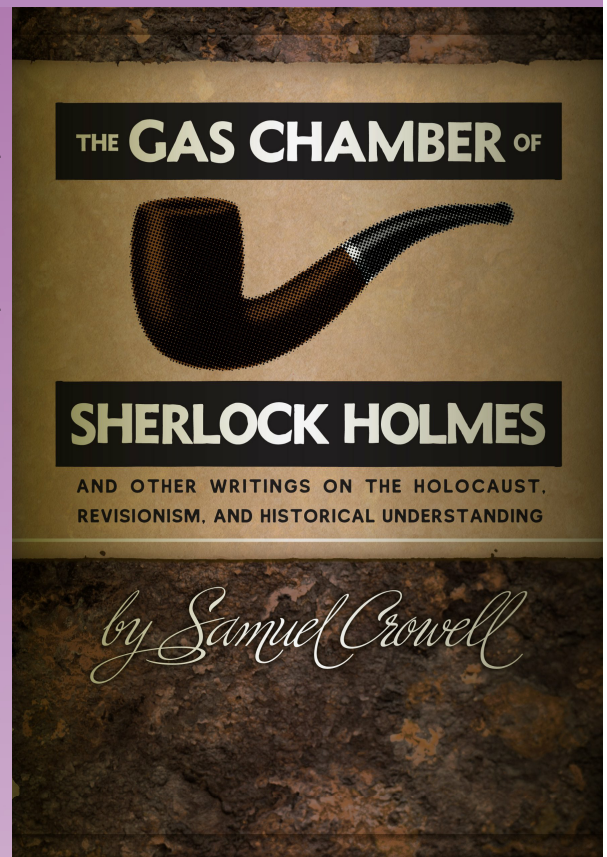

First time I've read anything from this author. I was pleasantly surprised by the logical approach to a very controversial subject.

He brings up points that help explain the mindset of the times and the reasoning why the Germans were doing what they did. Oddly the gassing claims has its roots in the First World War, and the fears and anxiety of its use before the second world war. Also of great interest was the explanation of the bomb shelters and them being equipped to prevent exposure to Mustard gas, which was a threat at the time by the All lies. Shelters were made to high standards for the day in even the labour camps. Unfortunately it made the accusations very easy for the All lies who chose to ignore motive and reasoning for their construction.

There is fresh information here for those who prefer a more truthful and balanced account of the "Holocaust".

....but Samuel Crowell has done just that in this brilliantly written book which debunks calmly and logically the belief that mass killings in gas chambers were the aim of the Nazi concentration camps. His logic, however, threatens a vast number of people, specifically the Jewish people, not to mention the entire nation of Israel, who benefit monetarily and psychologically from the belief in mass killings. And they do not react calmly to this kind of threat to their belief which is why Crowell has been forced to publish under a pseudonym. I am frankly surprised his book hasn't been blacklisted by Amazon; it is to their credit that they have not done so - yet.

This is why I strongly urge everyone to read this book while it's still available. It tells a truth which must be shared!

SAVE BOSWORTH BATTLE FIELD! ACT NOW!

Richard III has already suffered the indignity of being buried under a car park in Leicester, but now his final battleground could also be tarmacked over, under controversial new proposals.

A ferocious battle has commenced at Bosworth Field over plans to turn part of the historic site into a 155mph test-track for driverless cars.

The Battle of Bosworth in August 1485 was the deciding skirmish in the Wars of the Roses, which saw the death of England's last Plantagenet king and brought the Tudor dynasty to throne.

But part of the site belongs to Japanese-owned automotive specialists Horiba Mira Ltd, who have applied to Hinkley and Bosworth Borough Council to build a £26 million 1.2 million square foot track to test autonomous vehicles.

The area is part Historic England's registered battle zone, and historians claim that if the track is approved on Tuesday, it will destroy an important area, as well as blocking the view from where Henry Tudor first saw the army of Richard III.

Kelvin van Hasselt, vice president of The Battlefields Trust, said: "The Battle of Bosworth is a crucial part of England's history, which ushered in the Tudor era.

"The development would be on the western side which is a critical part of the battlefield and the area from where Henry advanced.

"School children should be able to go up to the area and contemplate where Henry looked out and saw Richard's forces, but the buildings may obscure the view and the landscape in the foreground will be changed forever. Who wants to climb a hill and just look at industrial buildings?"

Historic England has also written to Hinkley and Bosworth Borough Council arguing that the proposal will harm the site and destroy archaeological evidence which could be key to understanding "the ebb and flow of the battle as it progressed".

Dr Andy Hammon, Inspector of Ancient Monuments at Historic England, said: "The Battle of Bosworth was one of the most pivotal battles in English history.

"The development proposal is a substantial structure and would have a direct physical impact and indirect impact through altering the rural character of part of the battlefield. See below - object now to this destruction!

From The Battlefield Trust Bulletin

You may have heard by now that there has been an application to build a driverless car track on part of the battlefield of Bosworth. If the application goes ahead it will not only destroy a key corner of this important battlefield but also expose this - and, by creating a precedent, other battlefields- to the risk of a series of small developments. Individually these may not enough substantial harm to lead to an objection by Historic England but when taken together may well cause serious damage indeed.

Like many other interested parties we have only just found out about this worrying development. Although comments on the planning portal are now closed we have been informed that objections can still be lodged. So please help us defend this key historic site by emailing a brief letter of objection to planning@hinckley-bosworth.gov.uk

planning@hinckley-bosworth.gov.uk

Dear Sir or Madam

OBJECTION TO PLANNING APPLICATION 18/00425/FUL

I am writing to you as a member of the Battlefields Trust. Along with Hastings and Naseby, Bosworth is one of England's three defining battles. The battlefield is a site of national importance. In addition to its large and undoubted importance as a heritage asset it helps attract many visitors to and generate income for the area. As such every square yard of it should be treasured not destroyed.

The proposed development involves destroying land on part of the Registered Battlefield and is an area that may well have played an important part in the actual battle. If this application is accepted because it is deemed only to cause minor harm to the battlefield can easily followed by another piece of minor harm, and then another, until the sum of all this is serious damage.

For these reasons I would like to object to the above application and urge you to protect your valuable heritage by rejecting it.

Thank you so much for your support. It is much appreciated

Yours (Give full name and address)

POEMS 2018

Some short notes.....

Forty-four poems read by the author Eddy Morrison.

These poems cover a period of about 30 years of writing poetry. They cover many subjects from Nationalist and Patriotic themes to experimental Haiku poetry.

I started writing poetry, from my teens but only really took it up as a serious (can I ever be serious?) from the late 1970's and then off and on again up to the present day.

I'm calling this Audio Edition Collection of 44 of my works 'Poetry 2018' for not better reason than that the subject matter is so varied that its hard to put a fix on a title.

I have had three collections published before 'Epitaph to a Squashed Cat on a motorway', 'This Is Our Time', 'Songs of Truth and Sadness'

I have two poetry blogs - "Poetry Unlimited" and "Poetry in the Wilderness"

I have recordered each poem in WMA format and also MP3 format so they will play on PC's and most CD players . Eddy Morrison 2018

The Stranger

A few months before I was born, back in the early 1960s, my Dad met a stranger who was new to our small town. From the beginning, Dad was fascinated with this enchanting newcomer, and soon invited him to live with our family. The stranger was quickly accepted and was around to welcome me into the world a few months later. As I grew up, I never questioned his place in our family. Mum taught me to love the Word of God, and Dad taught me to obey it. But the stranger was our storyteller.

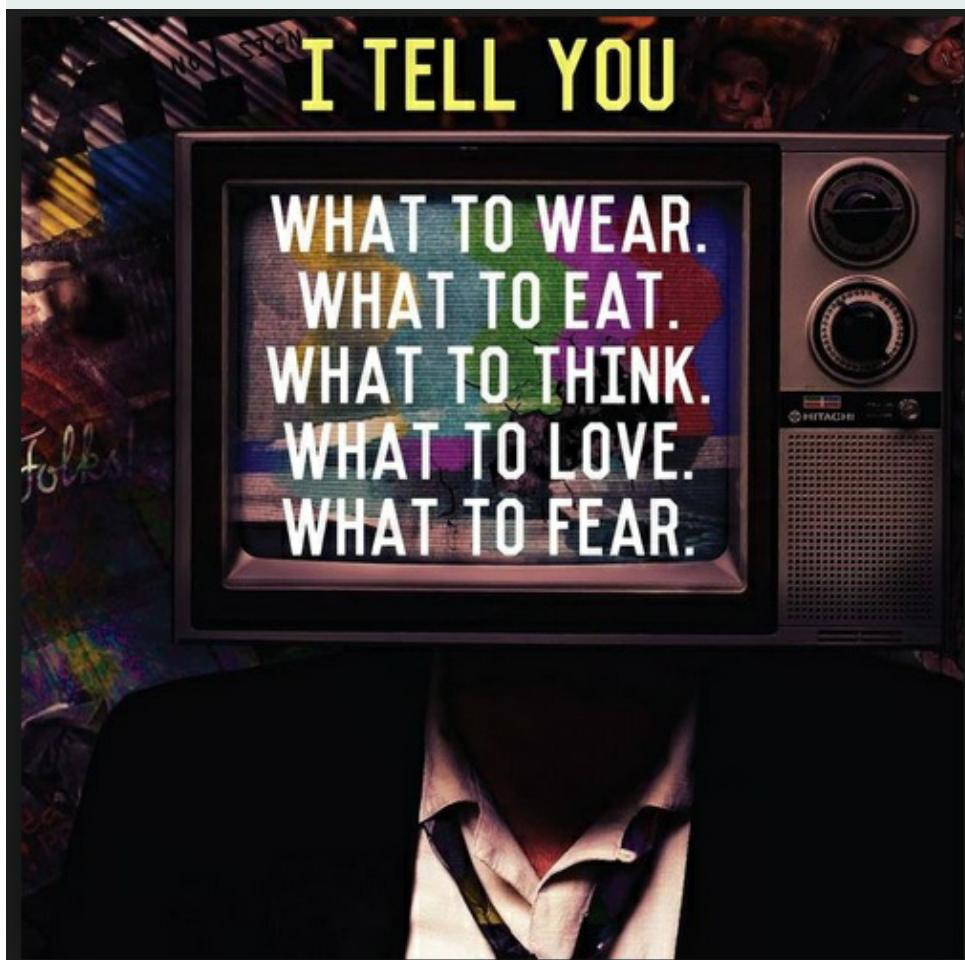

He could weave the most fascinating tales. Adventures, mysteries, and comedies were daily conversations. He could hold our whole family spellbound for hours each evening. He was like a friend to the whole family. He took Dad, my brother, and me to our first major league football game. He was always encouraging us to see the films and he even made arrangements to introduce us to several stars. The stranger was an incessant talker. Dad didn't seem to mind, but sometimes Mum would quietly get up - while the rest of us were enthralled with one of his stories of faraway places - go to her room, read the Bible, and pray. I wonder now if she ever prayed that the stranger would leave?

You see, my Dad ruled our household with certain moral convictions. But this stranger never felt an obligation to honour them. Profanity, for example, was not allowed in our house - not from us, from our friends, or from adults. Yet, our longtime visitor, however, used occasional four letter words that burned my ears and made Dad squirm. To my knowledge the stranger was never confronted.

My Dad was a teetotaler who didn't permit alcohol in his home - not even for cooking. But the stranger felt like we needed exposure and enlightened us to other ways of life. He offered us beer and other alcoholic beverages often. He made cigarettes look tasty, cigars manly, and pipes distinguished. He talked freely about sex. His comments were sometimes blatant, sometimes suggestive, and generally embarrassing. He spoke of homosexuality and other sexual deviances as though they were totally acceptable, to him affairs and divorce were the norm. He encouraged race-mixing and communism, even when those things were looked upon with disgust by most Whites, even the most liberal. I know now that the stranger influenced my early concepts of the man/woman, black/white relationship. As I look back, I believe it was the grace of God that the stranger did not influence us more. Time after time, he opposed the values of parents, yet he was seldom rebuked and never asked to leave.

Nearly forty years have passed since the stranger moved in with us, but if I were to walk into my parent's home today, I would still see him sitting there waiting for someone to listen to his stories and watch him draw his pictures. His name?.....We just called him TV.

In a long career filled with achievement, historian David Irving has a new feather in his cap — as a poster boy for the British government's anti-extremism campaign. It is an accolade he shares with internet provocateur "Michael J. Ryan". David Irving, a leading authority on the Holocaust, has been recruited by the British government to lead its campaign against "non-violent extremists".
